St. Patrick Was Brave
Lloyd George Hopeful
England Still Safe
By Arthur Brisbane

St. Patrick died nearly 1500 years ago. Every Irishman still venerates his name. On this day, he is honored the world over. A man saintly and courageous, he carried the faith from the point farthest west in Ireland, "beyond which no man was," far to the east in the Balkans.

As a boy he did not fear ferocious Irish wolfhounds, cargo of the ship on which he traveled to the mainland. The dogs were to be sold for use in war. As a grown man, he did not fear the fierce pagan Irish king on his hill of Tara.

St. Patrick was brave, and therefore the right patron saint for Ireland.

Lloyd George, who ought to know about Europe and war, since he and old Clemenceau won the big war, tells Universal Service this present war is "soft." France having learned that "even her most ardent friends in Europe shrink from war."

Lloyd George declares that peace "without derogating from the dignity of any of the powers" will be preserved, if France does not make it impossible.

Lloyd George says not one cent of Englishmen would vote for war, and not ten per cent for employing sanctions against Germany.

If enough rich Americans go to England in "escape kidnapers," the kidnapers may move after them, as professional gamblers follow on big game. London police arrested Alfred Molyneux, 31, trying to enter $1000 from the Countess Barbara Hamilton Haugwitz-Reventlow, offering to reveal a plot to kidnap her baby. Police knew by the moderate price it could not be an American "snatcher," or confederate.

Easily caught, the young man confessed he had invented the plot.

With "visibility not to zero," street lights burning by day, dust storms are blowing over deserts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and New Mexico.

By such displays of nature's "wrath," for which man's foolishness is responsible, the fertile areas of the world have been changed to deserts. Kerosene and dust storms are the destroyers, changing fertile lands to deserts, making worthless the greater part of formerly fertile Mesopotamia.

There is an opportunity for the human race to carry on a good war.

On Thursday the government starts field operations on its $500,000,000 "soil conservation program," a legal device to circumvent the Supreme Court decision against AAA. Farmers will be rewarded for diverting land from soil-depleting to soil-conserving growth. Operations on a bigger, more scientific scale than could be hoped for from individual farmers bargaining with the government will be necessary if any real attack is to be made on the dust-storm and erosion danger.

When battle ships were first made, sharp points at the end of the hull, the new invention was used to split open the hulls of our ancestral fellow men. Since then the sea has been made peaceful, except when used for brawling. Submarines and airplanes are now considered chiefly valuable for killing in war. Even that is changing; planes carry mail, more express and packages than bombs.

In Dade County, Florida, farmers use planes "flying low," to dust 12,000 acres of tomato plants, destroying insect pests. The government with a submarine is seeking the cause of earthquake and volcanic disturbances at the bottom of the Caribbean Sea.

The greater part of earth is covered with water. Floods with deep going submarines, men will explore that vast area of gold mines, oil wells and other wealth, as they now explore the land surface.

Scientists from the national research council and the navy hydrographic office are on a cruise, under water, of some 6000 miles. In a submarine delicate scientific instruments can be used with accuracy impossible on a floating ship. Radio will connect the submarine with the naval observatory in Washington.

Man is an ingenious creature, even if he does not know enough to destroy poverty or avoid wholesale international murder.

There are many kinds of brains. In Los Angeles, Francisco, a 50-year-old Mexican laborer, disgraced with a friend who plunged a knife into his heart. Dr. Saravich cut out sections of two ribs, exposing the heart, closed up the heart stab wound, with six stitches, and Mr. Parra

STORM FORECAST STIRS NEW FEARS

Severe storms with rain, sleet, higher temperatures and southeasterly gales are due to strike flood-ridden New England within 12 hours, the U. S. Weather Bureau warned.

Two inches of rain is forecast. That and a predicted general thaw may bring fresh disaster, especially in Maine, where fear of a typhoid epidemic was expressed by health officials.

These warnings came at the same time that the Charles river here had broken its all-time flood record for the third time in less than a week.

Another bad sign was a rise in

250,000 MAIL SO. BOSTON PARADERS

To the martial strains of 32 bands and drum corps, and the plaudits of 250,000 spectators, 7000 paraders wound through the streets of South Boston this afternoon in celebration of Evacuation and St. Patrick's Day.

South Boston has never seen a more colorful spectacle than today's parade, in which military, military, cavalry units, mounted police and veterans' outfits were followed by a full score of fanciful children's groups, most of them with drums and flags.

The weather smiled on the traditional commemoration of the twentieth of March.

Across the blue sky, a brilliant southern breeze sent long, billowing waves of white clouds, followed later by heavy battalions of solid white mists, which cast swiftly-moving shadows on the gaily decked buildings below.

But Trites said she never told him directly she was to have a child by him, never asked him for any money, never tried to pass off a doll as baby in his presence, never discussed with him the tragedy at Pacific Junction on the night of January 3.

Business District in Gardiner, Maine, Hit by Flood

Excellent air view of business district in Gardiner, Me., completely inundated by overflow from raging Kennebec river. Residents may be seen moving about in boats, while flood waters keep rising, and in some places rising to level of rooftops. Business was at standstill in this section of Maine today.

as rain and thawing temperatures threatened to bring further trouble to the flood-stricken area. This picture tells a vivid story of the hardships being suffered by Maine residents as a result of damaging flood conditions there. (Picture taken by H. F. Troxel, flying photographer of Portland, Me., airport.)

Maine Fights Flood Fever Peril

The Connecticut River at Turner Falls, in western Massachusetts. The river was steady and engineers were afraid that it would increase dangerously as soon as rain began to fall.

Higher up the river heavy ice was reported moving out of Bolton Falls, Vt., and was expected to jam up at the dam above Vernon, Vt. Vermont also reported that water impounded back of the flood control dam above East Barre had reached a new high level of 24.8 feet as compared with 22.6 for last year.

CHARLES AT PEAK

The Charles river reached a peak of 43.5 feet above sea level, according to readings at Riverside dam station in Newbury.

It has inundated new sections of Newton and Waltham. Several Dedham main streets are under two feet of water and traffic is severely impeded by police.

The dam at Newton Upper Falls had to be reinforced with planking and sandbags, and the 80-foot Kendrick bridge, between Newton and Needham, is menaced by ice.

Twelve families in Waltham are in houses surrounded completely by water. Forest Grove road in Auburndale and Quinlan road at Newen Lower Falls are both newly flooded.

POSSIBLE SNOW

The Concord river, which poured out over several thousand acres of land in Billerica and southern Lowell, flooding the main Boston-Lowell highway, is slightly lower. It is still high enough, however, to tie up industrial plants along its banks. Waterhead Mills in Lowell, where 200 were thrown out of work, cannot resume operations until Thursday.

The U. S. weather bureau predicted that Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont would have rain and warmer temperatures tonight, possibly changing to snow and colder tomorrow.

But the interior of Maine, where the rivers start, is due for heavy rain, the forecast said. Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut will have rain, thawing temperatures tonight and a heavy snow tomorrow, it was predicted.

FLOOD TIPS

By THE NEWSPAPER EDITOR. Nature broke her bounds last night, flooding the state with ice flows and wreckage, and flooding the Boston Evening American Newspaper Editor with excellent news items.

SENATE PROBE OF WPA URGED

Washington, March 17 (AP)—Before going to the Senate today to renew his attack on Harry Hopkins, Senator Holt (D. W. Va.) announced his aim was a senatorial inquiry into WPA conditions throughout the nation.

The investigation, he said, would shift charges that politics is involved with the handling of Works Progress Administration programs in many states.

The West Virginia has charged in repeated Senate speeches that WPA in his home state is politicized. Holt said that he had received complaints of politics in relief in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Texas and Arkansas.

Holt today adds that he has received complaints of politics in relief in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Texas and Arkansas.

DICKINSON FILMS 'SPYING TYRANNY' IN LOBBY QUIZ

Philadelphia, March 17 (US)—Criticism of spying activities of the Black investigating committee, Senator Dickinson (R) Iowa, warned that "terrorism" of public opinion is "utterly alien to America."

In an address at Temple University last night, Dickinson declared President Roosevelt has obtained from the Democratic Congress laws which weaken the legislative branch and concentrate power in his hands. Though the Supreme Court has held "New Deal" acts unconstitutional, they have been revived in different dresses, the Senator declared. He said: "The 'smoking' activities of the Black committee investigating the lobby are, of course, now well known."

"TYRANNY OF ACT"

"However justifiable may be an inquiry into deliberate misrepresentation to Congress of public opinion or its manipulation by lobby interests, this does not include invasion of the right of privacy, or the contemptuous ignoring of those constitutional safeguards for the individual which have been synonymous with liberty itself."

"Correspondence, whether it be by the United States mail or telegram, is inviolable. This would seem so obvious as to require no argument."

"But here again the issue is quickly distorted. From an invasion of private rights or constitutional guarantees, it becomes one of rights as between Congress and the courts."

"The immorality and tyranny of the act is lost sight of while Senator Black starts off on a new track and defies the courts to interfere with the prerogatives of Congress."

SEEKS MORE POWER
"Justice must wait until the more important question is decided of who is to be boss. But the lesson of disregard for the plain language of the Constitution will not be lost upon the country."

Paraphrasing differences between President Roosevelt's theory of government and that of the Supreme Court, unless they can be resolved, "neat even a more serious shadow over the nation's future than the problems which have arisen out of the depression," Dickinson said.

"By action rather than by words, the President has indicated—his oath to uphold the constitution notwithstanding—that he regards those provisions for the separation of the legislative, executive and judicial functions as handicaps to the New Deal program."

"He seeks increased power for the executive with a consequent reduction from their present equal status of authority now exercised by Congress and the courts."

LOBBY PROBES SEEK FUNDS

Washington, March 17 (US)—Money problems held the Senate lobby committee's attention today.

The investigators considered how to provide an "adequate fee" for the attorney retained to fight their battle against pending court attacks.

Besides this item, the committee has pending a resolution asking an additional $25,000 for investigation.

Colonel Crompton Harris of Birmingham, former law partner of the committee chairman, Senator Black (D) of Alabama, is the committee's lawyer. He appeared in court once to fight the move of the Chicago law firm of Winston, Shaw & Strawn for an injunction preventing the Western union from giving up files containing its messages. Harris said this fight will be a temporary injunction was granted.

Roosevelts Observe 31st Bridal Date

Washington, March 17 (AP)—Thirty-one years ago today Anna Roosevelt—sister of the late President Teddy who then sat in the President's chair—married Franklin D. Roosevelt, law student.

Today, in the executive mansion where she was often a favored visitor back in 1905, Mrs. Roosevelt is celebrating the anniversary with the law student who also became chief executive of the United States.

Back in those days, Mrs. Roosevelt remembers, she and her husband couldn't go on much of a honeymoon because he still had a couple of years to go at Columbia Law School.

In her last description of her wedding day, Mrs. Roosevelt called that while "everybody was polite to Franklin and me," they then congregated around "Uncle Ted," who gave the bride away, and left the couple alone with nobody to talk to.

For a time everybody had been "jettisoned" but T. R. might fall to get by the big St. Patrick's Day parade in New York in time to reach the wedding at the New York home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Henry Parish. After the wedding the couple went to see one of Uncle Ted's Rough Riders who was ill, and then went to Hyde Park.

Tonight, amid preparations at the White House for the President's annual fishing trip off Florida, President and Mrs. Roosevelt will celebrate with a few close friends.

A dinner party will include Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Miller and Under Secretary of State William Phillips. The President's mother may also come from Hyde Park.

protest that the baby that was there was yours?"

He said with a grim smile.

Again, as yesterday, Mrs. Bannister sat with her gaze on the floor, her sobbing for the time being. When Trites had finished his story he walked past her and she saw that he was smiling, but their eyes did not meet.

Trites continued his story, but when he had been separated from the Bannister home, he was not seen in the crowd today.

POWELL TO TESTIFY

Albert A. Powell, Sunday school teacher and another frequent visitor to the Bannister home, waited to testify as the case approached the ending.

Brought from Moncton as a possible Crown witness against her mother, 13-year-old Marie, younger sister in the Bannister family, at a nearby home. Definite decision to put her on the stand had not been reached.

Crown Prosecutor Hughes informed the court he was prepared to ask for a bench warrant for Leonard Harvey of Moncton, who had been subpoenaed as a Crown witness but had failed to appear after pleading illness.

Hughes told Chief Justice J. H. Macdonald the Crown was doubtful about the witness, and the court suggested Harvey be reached by phone and informed of the pending action. Harvey is one of those whose names Mrs. Bannister gave for reference when police first expressed doubt that she had given information to a baby.

WEAR SHAMROCK

The chief justice and several court officials and members of the jury were sprigs of shamrock.

Trites was recalled for cross-examination. Lambert questioned him about paying Mrs. Bannister $2 a week; Trites said she never asked for more.

Q—You were under the impression she was going to give birth to a child? A—Yes.

Q—What did she tell you? A—Not exactly.

Q—She didn't tell you that? A—Probably not.

Q—You formed that opinion yourself? A—From my own observations.

Q—But you remember what she said? A—Not exactly.

Q—As near as you can remember? A—She intimated she was going to have a child.

Q—She intimated you were responsible for her condition? A—She did.

NOT SURPRISED

Q—Did that surprise you? A—Not greatly.

Q—Did she intimate you'd have to pay for it? A—No, sir.

Q—Did you promise to pay for it? A—No, sir.

Q—Did she ever ask you for money for bringing in expenses? A—No, sir.

Q—Did you give her any money? A—Only after she went away. I sent her $10.

Q—Do you know whether she ever had a child? A—I do not know.

Q—Do you know if she ever was in that condition? A—I do not know.

Q—When you saw her on the 26th of December did she say she had given birth to a child? A—No, I asked her about the weight of it. I took it for granted she had had a child.

Q—She didn't offer to produce it, did she? A—No, sir.

Q—And you didn't see any baby till around January 6? A—No, sir.

QUizzED ON VIsIT

Lambert questioned about the first visit to the Bannister home for the questioning of Mrs. Bannister. Trites did not know at that time that Arthur was in custody.

Q—You had heard about the tragedy? A—Yes.

Q—When Mrs. Bannister went to your house did she know any of her family was suspected? A—No, Mrs. Bannister refused to answer some questions and Corporal Pettigrew told her if she realized the seriousness of the situation she would answer.

Q—When they left Mrs. Bannister stayed? A—A little while.

Q—And you talked about Arthur being involved? A—There was very little said. I may have asked her how he could be mixed up in it. There was nothing said about a baby. I walked home with her and stayed about a quarter of an hour. I saw the baby. She did not say it was here. I assumed it was.

Q—You thought it was her baby? A—Yes.

Q—And you had some suspicion it might be yours? A—Possibly it might be.

Q—Any conversation while you were walking up with her? A—Nothing.

Q—Ordinary conversation between two friends? A—Yes, sir.

BROUGHT FOOD

Lambert questioned about his next visit to the Bannister home, which was the following morning, January 7.

Trites said he gathered the Bannisters were entirely out of food and he took them bread, butter, milk and tea.

Q—Did you see the baby? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Where was it? A—Lying in a baby's bed.

Q—Any conversation about the baby? A—No, sir.

Q—Any conversation about Arthur? A—I think not.

Trites drove with his horse and sleigh to his shop after that visit, returned to the Bannister home that night with groceries furnished by the constable.

Q—You know when that a charge had been made against Arthur? A—No, sir.

Arthur? A—Yes. It was in the paper. I told Mrs. Bannister I had had news for her, that Arthur was held for murder.

Q—What did she say? A—I don't think she said anything.

After supper, at his own home, Trites said he read the paper to Mrs. Bannister, who called, but first he had to spend a half-hour getting a drunken man out of his yard.

Q—Did she cry when you read her the paper? A—She did, she cried all the time. Then I walked home with her. She was crying so she couldn't talk.

Q—See the baby? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Nothing said about it? A—No.

On a visit to the Bannister home the next night, Trites said he read more news of the tragedy to the accused woman. He said, there wasn't conversation about it.

SUPPLIES CRIB

He saw the baby again, but again nothing was said about it. Trites testified. The next night he took a small crib or basket to the Bannister home. He did this of his own accord.

He didn't see the baby but he read the paper to Mrs. Bannister again. She said she was in the house. It was dark when he arrived, but they lit a lamp and used the little oil for reading about the tragedy.

The next night, Trites testified, he took some oil and fuel to the Bannister home and was there only a few minutes when Mrs. Bannister was taken away. Trites remained a while with Marie and the baby until police returned and took Marie and the baby.

Q—Did Mrs. Bannister ever try to pass off a doll on you as a baby? A—She did not.

Q—Did you know they had a doll there? A—I did not.

Q—Did Mrs. Bannister ever suggest to you that you pay her any money? A—She did not.

Hughes took him for redirect examination. The Crown prosecutor immediately brought out that Mrs. Bannister had told Trites she would go to Moncton, where Mrs. Cool would look after her if she had money. Mrs. Cool was connected with the Travellers' Aid Society.

Q—You say the $10 you sent Mrs. Bannister was to cover back pass? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You owed her five weeks? A—I did.

Q—It wasn't five weeks ahead you paid her? A—No, sir.

Q—Why didn't you pay her regularly? You know it was a poor family? A—I wasn't always flush.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

A peek into the Wilken Family liquor closet
We've as to our Family's Whiskey right out when a neighbor stops by for a nip. Lately I've heard a heap of neighbors talk taking to this idea of having some of our Family's Whiskey in their liquor closet. It's just in case Harry E. Wilken, Sr.

Our Family's Whiskey being priced so reasonable—it's easy to keep a handy supply on tap!

Knowing how likely some neighbor or other is to stop by most any time, we're all for keeping the shelf full up with our Family's Whiskey. And it don't take much for everybody to do just the same as us. In the picture, that's me with my boys. Harry Jr. is stacking bottles, and my son-in-law Tom is reaching the bottles up to him, and the boy I'm chatting with is my son William.

If you're one of the folks that's so excited over the tastiness of our Family's Whiskey, you got to thank the boys for a whole lot of it. Granting I've had 43 years experience at making whiskey, this here proposition is a Family affair, and I just couldn't make out without those boys!

Luckless Princes Mdivani

BROTHERS' TRAGEDY

Exile Led To Riches

This is the second in a series of articles tracing the colorful lives of "The Glorious Princes Mdivani," three brothers in the noted Georgian family which was exiled to the Russian province in 1922. Two are now dead, victims of tragic mishaps. The male line of "The Luckless Princes of Mdivani" was reduced to a single survivor Sunday when Prince Serge was killed by his polo pony in Florida.

By PAUL WHELBTON
Bordering the Black Sea is the Russian province of Georgia, and it was here that the Princes Mdivani and their sister, Princess Nina and Princess Isabel, spent their early days.

Busy with his soldiering was their father, junior officer in the Russian Imperial Army, for in 1903 Bolshevik had been created at a conference in London and the name of Lenin was being heard more and more.

Two years later, Trotsky appeared with a soviet of workmen's delegates. The fabric of the revolutionists, in whose folds the tsarist reign was to be smothered a dozen years hence, was being inexorably woven.

It was closer to this situation that the Mdivani's father moved his family when positions came and he finally was called to St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, after their comparatively simple life beside the Black Sea, was a fairland of excitement in the Princes Mdivani and their sisters.

The sparkling snow under a cold sun, bright lights of shops at night, and the midnight officers and courtiers on the palace, drove along the Nevsky behind fiery steeds, glittering uniforms and women covered with jewels and furs all intrigued them.

Glorious Years
It was glorious for them, but it had to end. As the Princes grew older, and before their mother died, they found their parents discussing the increasing unrest, but the boys remained only vaguely aware of it and did not realize the significance.

The blow fell in March, 1917, when the revolution started. Nicholas II and his consort were arrested with their family and the story, still not confirmed, is that they were held captive until July 15, 1918, and then shot and their bodies hidden in a forest.

General Mdivani, late aide-de-camp to the tsar, offered a place of refuge for his motherless sons and daughters. Stripped of their lands and estates, they were among the first of the noble Russian refugees to choose France as the country of their exile.

It was in Paris that Marshall B. Crane, the millionaire Massachusetts paper manufacturer, met Prince Mdivani and became interested in the two older boys, David and Serge, whom he sent to the Academy at Andover. Until 1921 they remained at the academy.

Then they went back to Paris—David, Pola Negri, exiled Polish screen star, entered the scene. The second of the Mdivani movie star marriages—Serge to Pola and David to Mae Murray—began in Moscow before the first.

Pola Negri was the daughter of a Maso. Chagler, member of a fine Polish family, who had married a gypsy troubadour, only to have her troubadour exiled to Siberia.

According to Pola's mother, Pola and Serge had been friends from boyhood and had renewed their acquaintanceship while she was a member of the Imperial Russian Ballet at St. Petersburg some years before.

At any rate, the screen star was introduced by Serge to his younger brother, Alexis, who was to marry, a decade later, Louise Anne Van Allen, direct descendant of John Jacob Astor, and daughter of James Laurence Van Allen, late ambassador to Italy.

And after Alexis had been divorced by Louise, his brother Serge decided to marry her—and with brothers were to be tragedy's victims in violent death.

In Oil Fields
But before any of the Princes Mdivani married, they came here to America and went to work in the oil fields of Oklahoma. From there apprenticeship each advanced to the position of an operator and they were declared to have amassed small fortunes.

Then David went to Hollywood and met Mae Murray, a Portsmouth, Vt., girl, whose real name

PRINCE SERGE MDIVANI PRINCESS MDIVANI
A Polo Game Ended Their Honeymoon

was Mary King, and who had come up from the legitimate stage to star in pictures. They fell in love and another romance began to bloom.

Mae had attended the Portsmouth Dancing Academy, and because, from her grammar school days, she had always wanted to be a professional dancer, she was invited into a musical comedy chorus, reached the Standard Follies, was elevated to stardom and then was taken over by the movie. She was blonde, slender and was acclaimed to be one of the most beautiful girls in pictures.

In December, 1916, she had been secretly married to Jay O'Brien, New York clubman and polo player, but had been divorced a short time later. Her second husband had been with Robert Z. Leonard, former movie actor and a rising film director. They had been married August 18, 1918, and he had been her director afterward.

This romance also had failed to jell, however, and in Paris, in May, 1925, she had divorced Leonard. Afterward her name had been linked romantically with those of Rudolph Valentino and other screen stars. But she had denied these reports.

Met at Party
It was early in June, 1928, when Prince David Mdivani and Mae Murray met at a party given in Hollywood by Pola Negri. The attraction was mutual. To the Prince she was lovely as any woman he had ever seen.

Three weeks after their first meeting Mae Murray was leaving her home for the studio when she stumbled and fell. Prince David came along in his car. He picked her up, placed her in the machine and told her he was driving her to a doctor. She demurred, however, stating that she had not been hurt.

"David and I became better acquainted right away," she said. "I agreed, but when he proposed that we get married I said, 'No.' He turned the car right around and we got a license."

Two days later the marriage took place, on June 27, 1927, at Beverly Hills. Rudolph Valentino, the late star for the Prince and Pola Negri was there. He had been a friend of Prince David's since his childhood.

Through the marriage, the former Mary King of Portsmouth became a Princess, but she bore her new status easily. Likewise did she bear easily her status as a wife, as did Prince David his role of husband.

It appeared to be a match that would end all romance, particularly so when the couple, a year later, announced to an amazed world that she had become the mother of a baby boy and that they had kept it a secret because the effort might have on Mae Murray's public life.

The first of the Mdivani marital affairs had been a success.

Watch for the third installment of "The Glorious Princes Mdivani" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

OWNERSHIP OF EL PUT UP TO VOTERS
Voters in the district served by the Boston Elevated railway will have an opportunity to decide the fate of the line at the next state elections.

G. E. Marchand
These are a few of the many keys to advancement that will be demonstrated by G. E. Marchand, of New York, "America's Famous Maker of Successful Men and Women." Tonight at Tremont Temple.

As a direct result of applying Mr. Marchand's method, thousands have been able to break away from dull, routine jobs and attain unexpected success. Following are just a few excerpts from the many letters received from those who attend his program.

"More than doubled my earnings," says Frank H. Copeland. "Received three promotions with the Hudson Motor Car Co.," writes Wm. Lovell. "Now I am at the head of my own business. Success came from the start," says A. J. Thompson. "Increased my income from $4,000 to $7,000," telegraphs Irl R. Harris. "Last month I increased my pay check $97.32 over my previous month," writes J. S. Scola. Letters like these are constantly pouring in.

If you are really ambitious, come tonight. Mr. Marchand's program may be worth thousands of dollars to you in the years to come.

LOVE'S LITANY

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

But her mind was miles away. Next day Nelson Pierce came out to see her.

"Not much luck," he said. "I was afraid not. I had never talked much you know. Evidently not. I found plenty who knew you as his daughter, though. Let's see, Hector Bloomer is one—remember him?"

"Remember him! My goodness, he kept store there, even since I can remember. Gladys Platt and I used to buy all day suckers and potato chips there. I never liked my wife because she was dead he couldn't let me run wild—that was before he married Aunt Nettie, of course."

"I dare say. About your Aunt Nettie. Was prepared to put a lot of money into this thing. In fact she already spent a lot. Mr. Gilman and Stanley have had a man in Alaska and they've got everything cold. Of course, we have traced your father's activities, his most of those old times are dead too."

"I haven't got the records of his marriage, but it must have been a good ten years before you were born—maybe longer. You didn't tell me that Mimi was 26 when she died."

"Why she couldn't have been! She was awfully young. I can still remember how she looked. Very slender, and with sort of transparent white skin, and pale gold hair—ever so much lighter than mine. She was just a girl—everybody spoke of her as Dad's young wife."

"That's true enough—she was 25 years younger than he was. But she was 26 when she died—I have those records all right."

"Before Christie's eyes floated the picture of Mimi, a slender wreath of a girl making daisy chains for her on a green hillside that last spring."

"Could she have been that old? But Nelson Pierce seemed to know. He went on speaking."

"She was just a little more child, when she first showed up in Nome—don't forget that that was more than 20 years ago, and old Adolphus was in his prime then—nowhere in the forties, but full of fight still, and strong as a horse."

"He'd already made two fortunes—one in gold on the Yukon and another in a dance hall and gambling place he had in Dawson. Then he sold out and moved to Nome when the rush came there, and he picked up another fortune."

"Mimi didn't work long as an entertainer. They moved around a lot after the rush was over, and made a couple of trips to Seattle before they finally closed up and came back here to the States. Yes, he made a lot of money, Mrs. Latham."

"I can see him as a miner—he always liked mines and he always had some prospecting going on somewhere. But I can't think of Dad running a gambling place."

Suit Yourself With Utmost Chic, Guided by Fashion Congress Selections

THERE HAS never been such a season for variety in suit types—take it from one who clambered on the suit wagon several years ago, and who delightedly finds each week in the shops many suits with a touch of positive genius, for presentation before the Fashion Congress of America!

Here is a group of winners that are not only utterly fascinating in every detail, but individual, excellent in quality, and priced so that your taste and pocketbook will stay on friendly terms!

Left, Miss Francis Shea models a cream and brown bound's tooth check, imported English tweed topcoat which was chosen as a striking town topper for the shagreen men's wear suit in the next photograph. Bright, and casual without being the slightest bit careless, are the three inverted back pleats. Superb styling, don't you think?

And next, the brown shagreen suit that tailors itself around the feminine figure in slim perfection. It's equipped with a taffeta multi-checked ascot. And underneath is a cowbunny blouse of handmade Belgian lace, one of the heirloom class that smart girls are saving their dollars for these days.

Visions of hopping on boats and sailing for glamorous ports assailed the Fashion Congress members when Miss Frances Shea modeled this cape-suit of red and black imported plaid tweed. Pearl buttons pair off on the cut-away double breasted front. Lined with black crepe, the cape drops backward in a diagonal line, shorter in front. You've never seen a more graceful cape! A blue, red and white checked scarf at the neck heeds the edict to be daring in combining figure with figure. A confirmed landlubber will find the suit a racy addition to her town and country wardrobe. The brilliant red Gibson Girl sailor has wings flattened on the trim.

Next, a green wool swaggar suit is modeled by Miss Evelyn Hassman.

Fullness gathered around the neck in an up-standing ruffle and tied in by a fat cord with heavy gold tips cleverly suggests that that's the way the beautiful swaggar fullness of the jacket is achieved... though you know it's a smart falsehood because the shoulders are so very nice and smooth!

If you wish for shopping information on any of the suits illustrated, all Fashion Congress selections to be found in Boston shops, phone Annie Brink, Fashion Editor, L1 Berry 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

The Care of Baby's Teeth

By ROYAL C. COPELAND, M. D.

NOW comes the announcement of a way to fill teeth without pain, the discovery of Dr. Hartman of Columbia University.

Above all, it will enable the dentist to deal more successfully with children who often are difficult to lead to his office.

Every child should have regular dental examinations and care. The youngster should be taken to the dentist before a trifling defect becomes a big one with its creeping decay. Serious defects and loss of teeth can only be prevented by early dental care.

Unfortunately, many mothers make the mistake of neglecting the child's temporary teeth. Little do they realize that disease and decay of the temporary teeth will lead to disease of the second set, the permanent teeth.

A very common mistake is neglect of what we call the "baby molars." These four teeth are really permanent ones, but are usually mistaken for temporary teeth. Neglect of these vital structures may lead to serious disorders in the child's teeth and mouth.

In addition to regular visits to the dentist every child should have adequate amounts of tooth building foods in the diet. Foods rich in minerals, particularly lime, and vitamins, are necessary for growth and development of sturdy bones and teeth.

The diet should contain a quart of milk daily and an abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables, cereals, eggs and lean meats. The child must have an abundance of fresh air and sunlight. During the winter months when sunlight is not always available, cod liver oil should be added to the daily diet.

Do not rely entirely upon daily brushing of the teeth in order to insure healthy, sound teeth. This is only the beginning of keeping the teeth strong and free from infection and decay.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

WAKE UP AND STRETCH

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A SLIM waistline is your asset on youth. When the waistline goes beyond symmetry, all the other curves lose distinctiveness of charm.

Symmetry requires that the waist measurement shall be at least seven inches less than that of the bust, and that, without a well-defined waistline, no figure can be lovely.

The Greek divinity, Venus, had a waist which measured nine inches less than the bust. Among the famous figures of our day, Irene Castle McLaughlin is glorified by a waistline eight inches less than the bust measurement.

This favorite figure never allows her weight to vary more than three pounds from perfect, with every point in its proper place. Mrs. McLaughlin gives credit to calisthenics and exercise.

Erect Posture

At the time of the debutante although Irene Castle made up her mind that a beautiful carriage is the backbone of a good figure, and today she is distinguished by the natural, easy grace that accompanies correct posture and superb vitality.

If your waistline is inclined to advance with your birthday, stretch it back into symmetry. You can!

Stretching exercises will streamline your curves and give you the muscle tone necessary for correct posture. Wake up and stretch! Re-ach for an erect posture, and an abundant vitality.

ACCENT ON YOUTH

Stretching exercises react favorably on posture by stimulating the circulation to increase the tone and vigor of the muscles.

Starch and seven stars realize the relation of posture to figure loveliness and constantly work toward perfecting their carriage.

Most of us, however, seem to be satisfied with average posture as long as we do not develop unsightly humps and bulges. Don't be content with half-way-good posture. Let's make good posture take the lead in our figure program. It would pay all of us to remember that we are equipped with a perfect and complete set of muscles, with a purpose for each. Their upkeep, development and continued use is up to us, for posture is what we make it.

You cannot have a good figure without a slim waistline. Remember, the slimmest waistline bulges with posture slump.

NEW WPA PLAY BARRED AS RED PROPAGANDA

New York, March 17 (U.S.)—Hordes of increasing protest against Communistic propaganda in the WPA (Works Progress Administration) have been organized on another play in which Communism is lauded as the direct and pleasant highway to world salvation.

The interest of the WPA in this new play became known today as it was reported that "Communist propaganda" had been found in the play and that it was being barred from the WPA.

The new play, for which WPA is paying the authors $20 a week, is called "The Case of the Red." It is a play in three acts, three characters, and a room. One character is a Communist, one is a Red, and one is a Red.

In another scene one character remarks he doesn't see the difference between a Communist and a Red. The play is a "red" play, and it is a "red" play.

"The (Communist) is dangerous to world civilization," Bacon's action in the play was inspired by a telegram from the Federal Theater Veterans League, an organization of World War veterans WPA employees. They asked that Hopkins appear at a committee to investigate the theater project.

Bacon gave Hopkins the telegram and appended a letter in which he said: "The sublimated political drama is a political instrument of state propaganda in Russia, where the theater is a state monopoly. This coincidence appears to me to warrant some inquiry into the New York situation."

Bacon went on to quote from the people's commissar for education in Russia. He used this quotation: "The stage is a vital instrument of the revolution and all dramatic productions must be directed to overthrow the middle-class attitudes, ideals and sentimentalities."

The current play, as I have been informed by the WPA, embraces a bitter attack upon the Supreme Court of the United States and actually quotes in one scene the official language of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in which he characterized the AAA decision as "the greatest legalized steal in all human history."

"This play represents a complete fulfillment of the Russian formula as set forth in the Moscow regulation which I quoted."

MESSAGE IN RED
The review of the "Triple A" production concluded generally that it was a play "with a message."

One review said: "It concludes by no uncertain institution that the farmer, the workman and the middle-class consumer are the victims of capitalist speculation—in other words, 'the system.'"

"The story ends with a mass scene in which the farmers and workers join in a united front against the capitalist—substantially the farmer-labor party proposed by Mr. Roosevelt" (Earl Browder, head of the Communist party).

But for 37 Blotto enthusiasts, today is the day they won prizes in the ever-popular Boston Evening American contest.

Here's what these 37 did. They took a smooth sheet of paper, pressed it, signed their name on the crease, folded the paper again, and there it was BLOTTO.

Thus William J. Kenney, of 145 Magnolia street, Dorchester, gets $10, first prize. Second award of $5 goes to Nathan Leon Sternberg, Box 185, Quincy.

BLOCK FAVORS LANDON-ELY COALITION

Chicago, March 17 (U.S.)—Conditions in the United States demand a coalition ticket, to insure the "New Deal" defeat at the November election, Paul Block, nationally prominent publisher, declared here yesterday.

Block arrived from the coast after spending some time observing political conditions throughout the West. He left for Toledo later, he said.

"Sentiment for Governor A. H. M. Landon of Kansas is growing tremendously all through the West. His strength is becoming especially visible in California."

"I shouldn't be surprised to see that state instruct its delegation for him."

"I should like to see a Jeffersonian Democrat nominated as his running mate—someone like former Governor Ely of Massachusetts or Al Smith. I believe that is the best way to make sure of beating Roosevelt."

Block was indignant at the wholesale seizure of private telegrams by the Senate lobby committee, headed by Senator Black, Alabama Democrat, commenting: "It is one of the most serious invasions of private rights that has ever been witnessed. But one can't be surprised by anything the 'New Deal' does, any more."

"It is typical of the seriousness of the situation. The 'New Deal' simply must be beaten if the nation is to be saved from ruin."

"People cannot think of party politics this year. They must think only of the country's welfare. That is why I say a coalition ticket must be offered."

Ohio Editor Dies

Berkeley, Calif., March 17—Robert C. Byler, 61, former editor of the Ohio State Journal, Columbus, O., is dead here.

OKLAHOMA'S 21 DELEGATES TO BACK LANDON

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 17 (U.S.)—Assuring Governor A. H. M. Landon of Kansas a solid block of Oklahoma's 21 delegates to the Republican national convention, the state convention today adopted the unit rule for the delegates and at the same time instructed the six delegates at large for the Kansas.

The six delegates at large, added to six chosen in district conventions, just week and instructed for the governor, gave him a majority of the delegates, all of whom now under the unit rule are bound unanimously to support Landon at the national convention.

The delegates, in any event, would have been unanimous or practically so, as the remaining delegates were chosen by district conventions which endorsed Landon although not specifically instructing the delegates for him.

CHEERS FOR LANDON

The tremendous enthusiasm of the convention for Landon was dramatically evidenced when the 200 cheering Republicans leaped to their feet on mention of his name by James S. Twiford, Oklahoma City attorney and convention keynote.

"The answer is: That the three divisions of government, namely, legislative, judicial and executive, must be restored to their proper functions; that this country should and will be restored to constitutional government under the leadership of our distinguished neighbor, the Honorable A. H. M. Landon of Kansas."

SLOGAN ADAPTED

"The slogan is: A-H has both feet on the ground."

The six delegates-at-large chosen were Lew Watts, Ponca City oil man and prominent Republican leader; Raymond F. Gentry, Tulsa editor; Grant McCullough, Tulsa attorney, former United States judge.

Wisconsin Republicans Like Gov. Landon

FROM THE MILWAUKEE (WIS.) NEWS—Wisconsin's delegation to the National Republican Convention at Cleveland in June will be almost wholly unimpaired—perhaps entirely so.

The chief reason for this is constantly increasing sentiment for Governor Landon, of Kansas, in the Badger State as the DESIRABLE Republican nominee for President.

Growth of this following has come chiefly from personal of the Landon record, and from his statements concerning what the nation needs now in government, as made through press and over radio.

There is an organized effort in Wisconsin to name a Landon delegation to Cleveland.

REPUBLICANS HAVE PRACTICALLY TAKEN HIS CANDIDACY IN HAND BY DEMANDING A V UNINSTRUCTED DELEGATION—WHICH IS CONCEIVED TO BE EQUIVALENT TO A LONDON DELEGATION.

Wisconsin Republicans sense opportunity to in November replace the Raw Deal with a Republican administration.

They realize, however, that a prime requirement will be candidate for President who has demonstrated fitness to take over a national government facing an indebtedness of over thirty-five billions of dollars a year.

They are examining his record of service as Governor of Kansas, they believe Landon's accomplishments and understanding of what will be required of a national administration.

Senator W. R. Pine, Okmulgee; Vice Franklin, Oklahoma City, former president of the Independent Oil Producers Association, and Mrs. Carl Elch, Oklahoma City.

The convention instructed them to vote and work for the nomination of Governor Landon as the presidential nominee and every legitimate means for that end; and further ordered that all delegates from Oklahoma vote as a unit and be subject to the unit instruction, former United States judge.

KEENAN KILLER IN R. I. COURT

Providence, R. I., March 17—Thomas Callahan, wanted in Boston for the Club Chait slaying of John P. (Jimmy) Keenan, was taken under heavy guard to district court today for arraignment on a local charge of larceny from telephone coin boxes.

This case was continued one week and it was announced that Governor Theodore F. Green will hold a hearing Monday on the request of Boston police for Callahan's extradition.

Taken to court along with Thomas Cuniff, 35 Callahan was guarded by two cohorts of deputies and state police, on the trip from state prison at Cranston. The two men were arrested March 2 after a policeman stopped them for speeding. Callahan had been sought for two years.

Each Puff Less Acid A LIGHT SMOKE

OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

For twenty-five years the research staff of The American Tobacco Company has worked steadily to produce a measurably finer cigarette—namely, a cigarette having a minimum of volatile components, with an improved richness of taste—"A LIGHT SMOKE."

We believe that Lucky Strike Cigarettes embody a number of genuinely basic improvements, and that all these improvements combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Now that the Van Gogh exhibition has closed and it is possible to express an opinion upon it without having all kinds of amateur and professional critics jump down one's throat, it occurs to me that Mr. Ralph Adams Cram's notions about this most potent of "modern art" might be of some interest.

For the man has it, was been firm and forthright, in his ideas, not one to hide them under a bushel, and, besides, reasonably authoritative in such matters.

It is not without significance, then, that he devoted the penultimate chapter of his autobiography "My Life in Architecture" (Little Brown Co.) to a discussion of "Tradition Plus Modernism."

One might expect that Mr. Cram with his long and consistent career in reviving Gothic in American architecture, his atmosphere of old Boston, his catholic philosophy and his horror of a civilization ruined, as he believes by in dualism, democracy, bolshevism and "modernism" in its largest philosophical sense would be inclined to exercise and expurgate, as completely as possible the "modernistic" out of age.

Yet we are somewhat surprised to find he objects quite as strongly to what he calls "archaeology" in art, i.e., mere slavish reproduction of the old models, such as the architect's. Thus, by the way, is one of the reasons he has so little faith in the schools.

Misleading as A Greek Railroad Train

He feels, for instance, that buildings which have anything to do with the older European Catholic tradition or the younger American Protestant tradition should show signs of that tradition and influence.

On the other hand, buildings which obviously are outgrowths of the newer, industrial, democratic, non-religious and non-catholic civilization may well be "functional" in design, providing they are not "modernistic" in the bad fashionable sense.

But they should not attempt to express any cultural ideas older than the past half century. They have nothing to say about the culture of western man before the year 1800 at the longest.

But for all those phenomena that are the consequence of the mental, moral and material development of the past 100 years, this mode of artistic expression it has fashioned for itself can alone reasonably be used.

For a stick exchange or a department store, a moving picture palace, a garage, or a hangar, cocktail bar, or for the convenience of any of the newer forms of religious emotion and experience, it would be as irrational, perverse and misleading to revive the motives and the forms of past ages as it would be to design a Greek railroad train, a Byzantine motor car, a Gothic battleship or a Renaissance airplane.

On the other hand, he adds, there is no real reason why these arts expressive of true modernity need necessarily be ugly.

Transportation Design Can Be Beautiful

Of course, certain things in modern civilization are so ugly that he sees no reason why their expression in art should not be ugly also.

But certain of our most characteristic modern designs, such as mobile transportation by land, water, and air, can be and is very beautiful. He hopes that this beautiful modernism with its fine functionalism will eventually drive out the modernism that is merely grotesque and ugly.

Yet within limits modernism can produce real beauty, provided it does not disrobe the law of its being.

Just as modern things demand modern expression, as there are others that in their motivation show no break in time, however far back you may go. These are eternal things as compared with the ephemeral; and in their quality they may be called cultural in opposition to those that link up only with civilization.

"They compare home life, educational life, religious life. These in their inner quality do not vary at all. Here, I conceive, the application of 'modernistic' forms in all fields are strictly limited."

In the light of this we may perhaps ponder our conclusions upon even the paintings of the late Mr. Van Gogh.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

An English game known as badminton was introduced in these parts in 1908 by Dr. Richard Caines, a physician in Exeter street. In the intervening years, it has risen steadily in public favor. In New England alone, there are 100 badminton clubs. Boston society leaders, tired business men and college boys have taken it up. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lewis have yachting at their Chestnut Hill estate. In Marblehead a group of players converted an old movie theater into a court. Socialites who play include Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, Jr., Mrs. Benjamin Langmaid, Mrs. Harold Hodgkinson, Mrs. William White, Marjorie McBride, Mrs. Reginald Smithwick, Mrs. Gardner Pake and Mrs. George Wightman.

Professional and business men play often on the courts at the Badminton Health Club in Oliver street. Other enthusiasts have headquarters at the Badminton and Tennis Club in Homewood street.

Superficially, badminton resembles tennis. It is even faster. It is played on an indoor court over a net. The bat is shaped like a banjo. The "shuttle" or "bird" has a cork center, studded with goose quills.

Like tennis, the game originally was regarded as a wussy pastime. Husky footballers and other men who have gone to watch and patronize badminton have usually ended by becoming players themselves. A close match between good players can be exceedingly strenuous.

When Dr. Caines sponsored it, he commended it as a great body builder as well as a fascinating amusement. There are professionals, championships and all the rest of it now. The game has spread from coast to coast. Boston remains the leading badminton center.

"It would seem that your letter might have contained at least one word of apology or regret. This, I believe, would have been in keeping with common, not to mention academic, courtesy."

Noah Has Delegation In Boston Phone Book

In Boston's telephone directory are listed five Colts, two Bears, 40 Badgers, four Bulls, 13 Ducks, 18 Doves, seven Lions, 45 Lambs, and two whole columns of Foxes.

Besides the color names, Blacks, Whites, Greens, Grays and Browns, there are three subscripts named Noah. Under each of these names are represented by three families named Summer, 2 Winters, 14 Falls and 21 Springs.

On the sentimental side there are 22 Loves, 59 Darlings, 38 Sweeties, 18 Friends, and 1000s. Only 24 Doves are listed, while there are 136 Riches, who are rich, while there are telephone bills.

Two Shakespeares have telephones, one being William, Jr.

There are 63 Bird families, and 68 Fishes . . . Also Herrings, Salmon, and Pike . . . which seems quite enough of this for the present!

Clubs Join Businesses Insisting He Serve

Some successful business men collect objects of art, others go in for yachts or race horses. Wallace N. Watson, Boston insurance man, through 18 years of business is a collector of vice-presidencies. Even intimates are a bit hazy as to the number of vice-presidencies he holds.

Not only do the business houses so honor him. Golf clubs, insurance societies and even enterprises insist he serve. He holds a number of presidencies, too, such as headship of the Sales Managers' Club . . . but they're only about as many as he can carry on both hands.

Judith Allen, formerly Mrs. Gus Sonnenberg, and Jack Doyle, her new husband, are in Britain seeking bookings as entertainers. They expect to set the Thames afire, according to notices in English papers received here.

The former Belmont girl, born Marie Elliott, who rose so swiftly in the movies, and retired in favor of matrimony, was the guest of honor at a meeting of something called the Grand Order of Lady Ratings recently. In their literature agents for the public call Doyle, the good looking Irishman whose public career in America opened and closed the same night, the "popular singing boxer."

LOVE And Murder DENIED

MABEY SAYS HE DID NOT KILL

Few men, charged with first degree murder, and that by poison, could sit calmly in a cage discussing the merits of the case.

But Stephen L. Mabey, Jr., small, weazened, 35, a one-time Pennsylvania jockey, did that today when a waiting in the cell of the justice in Suffolk court.

ALTER Bees' Ball PARK TICKET BUYERS GET BREAK

By Bill Grimes

Three weeks from next Friday, weather permitting, the baseball fans who flock to the Boston National League park for the opening game of the intra-city series between the Bees and Red Sox, will be agreeably surprised at the numerous changes effected at the Calfney street arena since last season.

Long before Manager Bill McKinnis started to condition his Bees at St. Pete, George Hunt had been re-conditioning "The Hive."

It is a well-known fact that Southern training trips are very expensive junkies, but when a ball club decides to renovate a park which has been allowed to go to ruin, as is Braves Field, it is well in the "red" weeks before the opening of the baseball season.

In all probability, the Bees will be set back some $250,000 for their trip in and from and their stay at St. Petersburg, Fla. And on top of that tidy little sum, the change at "The Hive" will mean about $200,000.

EYESORE

Until Bob Quinn came to the arena, the Hive was a eyesore, but since Quinn came to the arena, the Hive has become a eyesore.

The structure was recently becoming a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked. The Hive would have been a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked.

Of course, the moving in of the playing field, 15 feet closer to the stands is the most radical change, but many other alterations have been made, all of which will meet with the unanimous approval of the fans.

Never has any Boston National League baseball club displayed its sense of humor as the one George Hunt will present in Manager Bill McKinnis and his staff.

A year ago Hunt was a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked. The Hive would have been a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked.

His crew could have been a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked. The Hive would have been a eyesore to the fans, and it was checked.

Just as soon as he had finished chopping up the balance and used the entire outfit.

To facilitate the work of the fans who had to be moved out of the park, Quinn had to be moved out of the park.

GIRL Wonder May BE LOST

SCHOOL BOARD TO DECIDE

Webster, March 17

(AP)—The Bartlett High school baseball team appeared today in danger of losing its ace box office attraction, Nellie Toward, the comely 17-year-old first baseman, who made the school's last baseball season an overwhelming financial success.

It seems that Coach C. F. Finnigan and the members of the school's athletic council are in no place for a team if she is the best first baseman in the state.

At a meeting on Tuesday night at the school, the council met to discuss the matter.

Nellie Toward, first baseman of Bartlett High school, may be forced to cut short her interscholastic baseball career as the school board has decided to drop her from the team.

Werber Situation Spices Contest

Bill Werber's demands to be traded and the refusal of the Red Sox management to comply with them makes the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Red Sox contest a wide open proposition.

A large majority of the thousands of fans who have sent in their predictions of the Red Sox opening day lineup against the Athletics selected Werber as their choice to play third base.

And with Eric McNair, late of the Athletics, to be reckoned with, there is every possibility that Werber, try as he may and good intentioned though he may turn out to be, won't find any difficulty in regaining his position in the regular lineup.

In fact, Jimmy Fox states emphatically that only Roger Cramer in centerfield, Manager Joe Cronin at shortstop and he himself at first base, are the only certain starters. Second and third base, left and right, will open.

This means that the least suspected lineup may be the one which will drag down the valuable prize awards, the precious Red Sox laurels.

So keep them coming, fans, the more the merrier. The games will open, and there's no telling who will lift the prize.

Amateur Bowlers Can Accept Money

Pro Pinman Defined LEFT TO ENTER

By Ed Cogswell
Only four days more, ye bowlers.

Yes, indeed, the dead line is midnight next Saturday for entering the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Grand Canoeing Tournament at the 25th Century Club, Boston, to be decided March 20-April 11.

Among the many letters from bowlers mailed about a year ago, standing after having completed the tournament, for each prize. He desires the money, if he can win, and, at the same time, wants to retain his amateur status.

My advice to the bowler was not to worry and let him be a professional. The rule of the American Bowling Congress is that a professional bowler, by definition, is one who has received money for bowling in the past year.

In a broad way this ruling may be construed as all bowlers, not professional bowlers, are amateurs. It is their wish.

The Prison Break

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Now you wouldn't think of a jail as being such a good place to have an adventure. I mean, when anybody speaks of a prison, you get the general idea of a bunch of guys all locked up in cells, and everything so orderly that there was no more chance of any excitement than there was of a flood in the Gobi Desert. But you know, every once in a while, things do get exciting in the best of prisons. I'm referring to those times when the siren begins to scream, and the guards on the wall take a tighter grip on their riot guns, and the word goes around that a prison break is under way.

But again, in a large office, trouble was brewing—there it was, on the top page in the Annals of Crime and Detection. The title of the magazine was "Dances of the Damned." The story was about a group of thieves who had been caught and sentenced to death. The story was about a group of thieves who had been caught and sentenced to death.

That's where Ed O'Brien came into the picture. As they burst in, Ed leaped to his feet, half expecting to be shot down on the spot, but they paid no attention to him. One of them yelled: "Get that so-and-so in uniform." But before

But Ed and John Burdett, who were in the cell, saw the men in the photograph. For Ed had been in the cell, and John had been in the cell, and both of them had been in the cell. They were not sooner inside than the door of the wardens' office burst open again and the escaping prisoners were seen.

"We stayed where we were until the last shot had been fired and the place was quiet. Then we got up and left the booth, expecting the worst. But the prisoners had gone out into the courtyard and were trying to escape by the back door."

No matter where you work, or where you live, boys and girls, you're sitting right on top of a red-hot adventure. I'm willing to bet that every doggone one of you has had a thrill that is worth exactly ten bucks to me—and to you. Think it over. Write up that most-terrifying experience. Then send it to me. We had an outbreak, started today.

Until then—give yourself a break!

Scraps of Paper

IN the early stages of the World War, allied propagandists made effective capital out of the charge that Germany cynically regarded sacred treaties as mere "scraps of paper."

Unquestionably, the tearing up of the Locarno agreement is another case in point, but this time the outside world will be somewhat less impressed.

FRANCE, AS UPHOLDER OF INTERNATIONAL MORALITY, WEAKENED ITS PRESTIGE IMMENSURABLY BY DEFAULTING ON HER OWN SACRED PROMISES TO PAY THE WAR DEBT TO THE UNITED STATES.

When Great Britain, Italy and the other associated powers, except little Finland, joined France in regarding the sacred war debt covenants as mere SCRAPS OF PAPER, something deleterious happened to world public opinion.

Now it is apparent that France and the other allies never could have afforded to default.

IN ORDER TO SAVE A FEW PALTRY DOLLARS, THESE NATIONS HAVE SUFFERED IMMENSURABLY IN PRESTIGE.

AND perhaps Uncle Sam, who was intended to be the chief victim, is the real gainer.

As a result of the experience of base ingratitude this nation will not again be so easily influenced by alien propaganda to intervene in Old World quarrels.

Debtors that repudiated their solemn obligations have gained nothing.

They have impaired their credit, which was infinitely more important than their cash.

The full extent of their loss will not be known until their next hour of maximum need.

Their own record of broken promises and repudiated promises makes them laughingstock as they seek to pass judgment on Chancellor Hitler's tearing up of the Locarno "Scrap of Paper."

A Pledge for Patriots

One hundred and sixty years ago the British troops under General Howe evacuated Boston. It was a victory for the Continental Army. The city rejoiced.

The evacuation was due in large part to the leadership of George Washington. Acting with the foresight that characterized his entire life, he had fortified Dorchester Heights the night before.

Withdrawal or annihilation faced the enemy. They chose to withdraw.

Today as we celebrate that memorable victory, we should rededicate ourselves to the ideals of Washington, resolving to cherish forever the liberty and freedom he and his compatriots bequeathed us.

That parade last night that occupies Times Square between 5 and 7 in the evening leaves the national hubbubbing area to the world's most regular, the falconlike fellows with lemon-laced bellied coats whose lips are so deftly portrayed in the fiction of Damon Runyon. Sulphuric talk of jibes and smart money.

Expanding with ego that knows no limits. Bigger boys who rush into Lindy's and make celebrities enjoy their party.

They are the incredible phantasies who upstage the tradition-bearers. Jealousy, envy, rivalry. Ruffing the moment in silver strings and scarlet of burlesque that being an many wraiths a cropper, they somehow always manage to gallop through.

No modern historian has exposed the secret of their triumphs without toll.

Photographic pose No. 3004: Why that almost-legendary snake look when you face a camera? The result says: "I'm a snake." Those ten little boys would still be living in the gutter, but for the flick of a whip.

Never before in American history has an administration secured its reelection and assured of its complete domination of the national convention of its own party attempted to weaken the pillars of the opposition by attacking the national convention.

The platform of the Philadelphia Convention was the platform of the Philadelphia Convention. The platform of the Philadelphia Convention was the platform of the Philadelphia Convention.

Outstanding, perhaps, of all St. Patrick's contributions to mankind is the fact that he brought to the worship of his God a whole nation WITHOUT THE SHEDDING OF A SINGLE DROP OF BLOOD.

Fourteen centuries have come and gone since the Apostle of Ireland walked the earth. Nations have risen and fallen. But his name lives in unfaded glory not only in Ireland, but throughout Christendom.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 17.—Eugene Walter bobbed up, trout-like, in the swift Bristol currents recently for a nibble at New York and the city. He presented a new horror of the hedgerows. The chief interest, however, was in Walter's return in a new sort of theatrical role.

He was about the first of the newspaper reporters to attain playwright success, attending MacArthur and Hecht, Ward Morehouse and a dozen others by 20 years.

His success became a saga of the new, young and inspired many literary surge toward the metropolitan man.

Walter was indeed among the pre-war boomers of fiction. A newspaper reporter, he wrote a novel, "The Great Game," which was a success.

Now it is apparent that France and the other allies never could have afforded to default.
